

EDUCATION SEMINAR

Making the Economy Work for Workers:

“How the Game is Rigged and How we can Fix it”

In partnership with McMaster University, Unifor offers Educational Courses available for our members. These courses are part of a Labour Studies Certificate Program.

This is the second course being offered this term. It is a two night video conference course called “Making the Economy Work for Workers” scheduled for Monday November 28th and December 5th. Participants will discuss the issues surrounding workers and the frustration of feeling like they are being left out with current government budgets and an economy that rewards the wealthy. The keynote speaker, Canadian Labour Congress Economist Angella MacEwan will lead the discussion.

New workers, veteran workers, and retirees are all encouraged to attend this course. Participants will connect with others from across Ontario to develop an understanding of the current challenges for workers and retirees and to work together to find solutions.

Classes will be held at the Union Hall in St Catharines. For more information or to register contact Peter Scott or Rob Acker
